ADMIRAL PEARY, DISCOVERER OF NORTH POLE, DIES

Had Been in Poor Health at Home in Washington For Number of Years.

TRANSFUSION IS FUTILE

Thirty-five Operations Performed in Two Years: Noted Explorer Made Search for Pole Life Work; Wife, a Bride on First Trip, His Companion.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20— Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, retired, Arctic xplorer and discoverer of the North Pole, died at his home here today rom pernicious anemia from which e had suffered for several years. Arangements for the funeral have not een completed, but he will be buried ith full naval honors.

Admiral Peary submitted to a blood ransfusion at a hospital here 10 days go. He later was removed to his ome and his condition was reported s somewhat improved. He gradually rew weaker and the end came early his morning. Dr. H. F. Strite, the admiral's physician, disclosed that the ransfusion was the 35th to which the dmiral had submitted within two ears.

Robert Edwin Peary, for many years oted as an arctic explorer and famous as the discoverer of the North Pole, was born at Cresson, Pennsylvania, May 6, 1856, the son of Charles N. and Mary (Wiley) Peary. He received a good common school education and, having passed through a preparatory school, entered Bowdoin college, from which he graduated in 1877. He took a scientific and mathematical course, which enabled him, on October 6, 1881, to enter the United States Navy as civil engineer.

His first experience with Arctic explorations and Arctic conditions was in 1886, when he was sent to Greenland, to explore the interior. He thoroughly explored the ice cap in the interior and made a survey of Disco Bay, 70 degrees Northern latitude.

Mr. Peary became greatly interested in Arctic exploration and finally decided to make the discovery of the North Pole the object of his life's work. When at last his opportunity came and he was placed in charge of the polar expedition which the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia sent out in 1891, Peary was accompanied on his voyage by his wife, who shared his enthusiasm in polar research and from that time on braved and shared with him the dangers, privations and sufferings and many of the narrow escapes of her husband's daring dashes into the icy regions.

In 1893 Peary again headed an exploring expedition to Greenland and once more his faithful wife accompanied him. In winter camp on this trip, in the midst of ice and snow, only 3 degrees from the North Pole, Mrs. Peary became mother for the first time, giving birth to a healthy girl who was named Marie Ahnighito, the Snow Baby."

Leaving his wife and baby girl in safety at the winter camp, Peary made trips northward from Anniversary Lodge on Whale Sound that season. During this voyage Peary made thorough study of the little tribe of Arctic Highlanders inhabiting that region and in the following year discovered the famous "Iron Mountain."

Peary went north again in 1896 and in the following year he again ventured northward, accompanied by his wife and daughter.

In 1898, as the commander of an expedition equipped and sent out by the Peary Arctic club of New York, Peary, accompanied by his wife, again set out for the Arctic regions, prepared to remain in the far north for three years. In July, 1905, Peary once more sailed North in the steamer Roosevelt, specially built for this purpose after designs by William E. Winan, of New York, by order of the Peary Arctic club.

The eighth, last and most successful attempt to reach the North Pole was undertaken by Peary in 1908. The steamer Roosevelt sailed from New York on July 6, 1908. The ship heading toward the frozen North, proceeded to Kane Basin, establishing winter base at Cape Sheridan, Sept. 5, 1908. The expedition left Cape Sheridan for Cape Columbia on February 5, 1909, in five detachments. These detachments were sent back one after the other, the fourth, in command of Capt. Bartlett, leaving Peary near the 87th parallel.

From that point, with one member of his crew and four Eskimos, Peary made the final dash of 130 miles to the pole in five days. They reached the Pole April 6, 1909.

The journey from Cape Columbia to the Pole had been made in 27 marches. The return trip to Cape Columbia was made in 16 marches. The rest of the voyage was uneventful and the Roosevelt reached Indian Harbor, Labrador, in safety, from which point Peary sent the startling news of his discovery of the Pole on September 6, 1909. The announcement created considerable stir in scientific circles throughout the world in view of the fact that on September 1, Dr. Frederick A. Cook of Brooklyn, who had been making exploration in the North for several years, upon his return from the North, had sent a telegram in which he claimed to have reached the North Pole on April 21, 1908, almost a year before Peary.

These rival claims led to a long controversy and eventually to the discrediting of Dr. Cook's claims.

TWENTY-ONE FATAL MINE ACCIDENTS IN SOMERSET IN 1919

Cost a Life Every 244,722 Tons of Coal Mined, Report Shows.

"TAKING CHANCES," CAUSE

SOMERSET, PA., Feb. 20.—It cost a human life to mine every 244,722 tons of coal produced in the 20th Bituminous district, comprising the greater part of Somerset county, in the year 1919, according to the annual report of State Mine Inspector Fletcher W. Cunningham of Somerset which was forwarded to Harrisburg today.

The production for the year was 5,388,880, which was 354, 403 tons more than in 1918 and 592,446 more than in 1917. Inspector Cunningham's report shows 111 mines in operation, of which only four are gaseous. Seven new mines were opened during the year.

There were 22 fatal accidents during the year, one outside and 21 inside the mines.

The mines of the district were in operation an average of 195 days. Of 6,709 men employed during the year 3,368 were Americans, 698 Polish, 582 Italians, 170 Slavonians, 129 Hungarians, 456 Russians, 282 Austrians, 161 Tyrolians and the balance divided among 17 other nationalities.

There were few improvements other than those absolutely necessary in and about the mines.

The inspector's report shows an increase of six fatal accidents over 1918, mostly due to the victims taking unnecessary chances. "In some cases the fatalities appeared almost suicide," the report says. On account of the feeling of unrest, high wages and the high cost of living, the inspector says, it seems that mine workers are more careless than in normal times. Inspector Cunningham also points out in his report to the Department of Mines that employment of certified mine officials cannot be enforced under the workmen's compensation law and urges a change in the state constitution to remedy this situation.

SKY MAY BE LIMIT

Users of Oil Likely to Find Themselves at Mercy of Producers.

By Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 20—The market for Pennsylvania crude oil was thrown wide open here today by the announcement of the Joseph Seep purchasing agency that beginning March 16 it would no longer sell oil to independent refineries. The reason given was that it did not have enough oil for its own business. Increased consumption of Pennsylvania crude oil during the past few years has steadily forced up the price until now it is quoted by the Seep agency at $5.65 a barrel, three advances having been made since the beginning of the year.

The action of the Seep agency, it was said by veteran oil men, would return the market to the conditions which prevailed years ago when there was no powerful buying agency through which prices were stablized. No one would predict to what heights quotations would go but refiners without their own crude production, it was stated, would be compelled to get oil wherever they could and pay such prices as producers saw fit to demand.

COMMITTEE IS NAMED TO PROBE GAS SITUATION

Three Hundred Persons Throng Elks' Temple to Discuss McKeesport Field.

TRUTH IS TO BE TOLD

Nearly 300 men directly or indirectly interested in the McKeesport gas field, among them T. B. Donnelly, Robert F. Ryan, R. A. Neville and E. A. Bailey of Connellsville, attended a mass meeting in Elks' temple, McKeesport, Thursday, and with the avowed determination of "giving the world the truth" as to the gas situation there, launched their campaign by authorizing Assemblyman Sydney G. Willison, chairman of the meeting, to appoint an executive committee. Mr. Willison appointed former County Commissioner Gilbert F. Myer, chairman; Joseph Ruben, McKeesport furniture dealer; Herman H. Tully, McKeesport real estate dealer; J. J. Fagan, Pittsburg real estate dealer; W. J. Abattichio, Braddock business man; F. A. Reed, McKeesport shoe dealer; David A. Foster, of the Foster Brendel oil and gas interests; Robert Baldridge, cashier of the Union National bank of McKeesport; Samuel McCleary, of the National Tube company, and James L. Quinn, editor and publisher of the McKeesport Gas Journal.

Caustic comment was aroused by display of a large map, said to have been issued some time ago by the department at Harrisburg of, which State Geologist George E. Ashley is at the head.

"This map showed in red blotches," Chairman Myer said, "places in the state where there were natural gas deposits. I was told the map did not indicate there was any gas at all in or near McKeesport or, in fact, within 50 miles of our city.

Several speakers asserted that, since Mr. Ashley apparently did not know there was gas here until local people had found it in large quantities, his report published a few days ago probably was not very accurate and did not contain much information.

Methods of contradicting statements in Mr. Ashley's report were discussed, as it was thought the report was more or less antagonistic to the gas field. Many persons present appeared to think the report did not do justice to the actual conditions.

Stating he was at work formulating a questionnaire to be filled in by officers of all companies operating in the McKeesport or Snake Hollow gas and oil field, Mr. Myer said his committee will meet today and begin the work of collecting data as to capitalization of the companies, the number of stockholders in each, the daily production from wells, the depth of wells now being drilled, what contracts have been let and what material is on hand, together with other facts needed in a comprehensive survey of the situation, by proper use of which it is intended to safeguard the investments of the public and represent all the interests of McKeesport on a business-like basis.

The committee and a permanent organization, to be selected at a mass meeting later, plan to endorse all companies which measure up to a standard of honesty and fair investment.

Whether this committee will prosecute perpetrators of any frauds that may be disclosed, Mr. Myer could not state, but he said that at least such concerns would not be endorsed.

"There have, unquestionably, been many irregularities here," said Mr. Myer, "due mainly to the fact that the business has been done in a hurry-up manner in some instances. Unfortunately, much of the business has been transacted in a careless, slipshod manner. It would be unfair to say there has been any considerable dishonesty until we get the facts, but we shall hew to the line, let the chips fall where they may."

Lineman Near Death.

GREENSBURG, Feb. 20.—Howard Hyde, 32 years old of Greensburg had a close shave from instant death Wednesday afternoon when a telephone pole on which he was working snapped off at the ground, pinning him beneath it. That the pole fell across a slight depression in the ground and that his head encountered the hollow of a ditch instead of the frozen ground probably accounts for the fact that his head was not crushed.

TWENTY HYDRANTS TO BE INSTALLED AT S. CONNELLSVILLE

Council Orders Sale of Chemical Fire Trucks and Purchase of Hose.

FOR BETTER ILLUMINATION

South Connellsville will have 20 fire hydrants installed immediately, it was decided Thursday night at a meeting of town council. The committee on hydrants was authorized to go ahead with arrangements to get them. Members of the fire department and the committee will confer with the superintendent of the Connellsville Water company tonight as to the most advantageous locations for the plugs. The water company will arrange to tap its mains soon and the plugs will be installed immediately on their arrival from the factory.

In addition to the plugs council authorized the purchase of 1,000 feet of standard fire hose and two nozzles. The two LaFrance chemical engines now owned by the fire department and which have been used only a few times will be sold to the highest bidder.

Six new street lights, to be placed at points designated in petitions presented by citizens, were ordered erected. The West Penn will immediately go to work on the lighting and they should be burning within a week.

The unsafe condition of the lower end of Gibson avenue, which has been washed out by heavy streams of water, tearing big holes in the street and undermining the sidewalk, was reported but an investigation revealed all the bad section of the street was in the city limits of Connellsville.

W. P. Barthen, who filed his affidavit of election and was sworn into office, attended his first meeting last night. He succeeds N. B. Tannehill, who failed to qualify after being elected to office.

LANSING SERVED HIS CHIEF WITH GREAT FIDELITY

Wilson Given Credit For Many Things Deposed Secretary Had Conceived.

REAL BREAK ON TREATY

Did Not Favor Coupling the League of Nations With the Peace Treaty, Believing Each Should Be Considered Separately; Always on His Job.

By DAVID LAWRENCE.

Copyright 1920 by The Courier.

(This is the third of a series of three special articles on the Wilson-Lansing break, from the pen of one of the best informed Washington correspondents. These articles set forth with remarkable clearness the causes and significance of an event that has stirred the national capital amazingly.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—Robert Lansing was popular as secretary of state. Diplomats recognized the awkwardness of his position, particularly his inability often to speak for the President because the latter individual would not take him into his confidence, but they made allowances for this and liked Mr. Lansing for such frankness as he was able to display. He was courteous with foreign governments and although he differed again and again with the President as to the wisest policy to pursue, he never showed it to a foreign government. Whenever the President decided a question, that was enough for Robert Lansing. Like an ambassador in a foreign country, he followed instructions faithfully.

Nevertheless, it must not be imagined that Robert Lansing has not exerted a very great influence on our foreign policy in the last four years. Even before he took office, he framed the neutrality policy of the government as counsellor of the Department of State and is generally credited with having been the author of the phrase "a strict accountability" which was used in one of the first Lusitania notes. He wrote many drafts of notes that never saw the President's eye and he wrote many that were pigeonholed by the President. But like a true counsellor he was always ready with a comprehensive statement of the alternatives involved. Usually, he gave the President the various courses of action which could be followed and, while politely suggesting which he himself thought best, invariably left it to the President to choose. But Robert Lansing knew traditional American doctrine and he also put in every note he wrote a certain liberalism and altruism, that so many people would promptly say was Wilsonian. Even on the notes for which the President received the highest praise, you couldn't get a word out of Robert Lansing as to the part he played. I remember particularly one of the best notes ever sent out by the United States government, a communication to the Austro-Hungarian government about the requested embargo on arms. Solicitor Woolsey and Secretary Lansing framed that note and the editorial praise which the President received for doing what he didn't do had no effect on the feelings of the men in the Department of State, who took it as a matter of course.

Mr. Lansing will always be remembered for his clear definition of pan-Americanism and for his splendid conception of what our relationships should be with the nations south of us. It is true that he didn't favor the coupling of the League of Nations with the peace treaty simply because he thought better consideration could be given to each separately. But he didn't press his views and when the American mission got to Paris, he worked as hard as anybody to help realize the ideal which the President had set before the peace conference. He wrote a plan for a league of nations and submitted it along with the rest but showed no signs of displeasure when it was not approved, nor was he peeved at the frequent prominence bestowed upon Colonel House. He took the President's idiosyncrasies for what they were worth and like a faithful servant did all he could to keep relations harmonious.

But the President, instead of appreciating the self-sacrifice of his secretary of state, often times forgot he had one. He gave so much time to Colonel House and placed so much confidence in the man from Texas that it was a subject of public comment on every side. Yet, Mr. Lansing had his pride and did his job. It was when the Shantung settlement came up and when the President became involved in the meshes of European diplomacy that Mr. Lansing expressed dissenting

DON'T SUFFER WITH NEURALGIA

Use Soothing Musterole

When those sharp pains go shooting through your head, when your skull seems as if it would split, just rub a little Musterole on your temples and neck. It draws out the inflammation, soothes away the pain, usually giving quick relief.

Musterole is a clean, white ointment, made with oil of mustard. Better than a mustard plaster and does not blister.

Many doctors and nurses frankly recommend Musterole for sore throat, bronchitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet—colds of the chest (it often prevents pneumonia). It is always dependable.

FRIDAY EVENING, FEB. 20, 1920

THE INTERCHURCH MOVEMENT.

The formulation of the program of the churches which has been given the name of the Interchurch World Movement is not an admission on the part of religious leaders that the church has failed in meeting the great problems of the day, nor does it mean that necessity exists for a change in religious beliefs. It does mean however that the Church is awakening to its new opportunities for service and that recognition is being given the need for new and more universal applications of the teachings of Christ.

The verities of the Christian religion—that Jesus Christ is the son of the living God and the Savior of the world—are eternal and unchanging, have been from the day of His birth and will so remain until the end of time. But the adaptation of His gospel to present day needs of the world require methods that differ from those employed in the early years of the Church's history. This is true in the same sense that new methods of applying the fundamental and age old truths of science and mathematics have become necessary with the advances in human knowledge.

The activities of the Interchurch World Movement planned for next April does not contemplate the exploitation of new doctrines nor the disavowal of old beliefs. In essence it is designed to give a new emphasis to the fundamentals of the Christian religion by bringing those agencies which touch the daily lives of the people under the vitalizing and ennobling influences of Christianity as exemplified in the life of the Savior. In this means it is hoped to create a more wholesome and invigorating atmosphere and surroundings in the workaday world as an indirect but potent and powerful means of neutralizing the spirit of the Christian religion in the heart and minds of the people. Differently stated it is proposed to Christianize the whole social order rather than attempting to churchify the people.

This is not a new discovery of the concept and purpose of the Christian religion. It is a broader minded view of the mission of the church in present day relations of the people. Previously the readers in religious thought were more largely concerned with dogmas, beliefs and creeds and instrumentalities through which the people would be brought to the Church than they were interested in devising ways and means of taking the Church to the people.

Without forgetting for a moment or minimizing in the slightest particular the divinity of Christ the movement now being launched is to give larger emphasis and greater importance to His human side. That is by going outside the four walls of the church building as the place where the precepts of Christ are taught the movement contemplates a closer contact with the people by giving them practical demonstrations of Christianity in action in many new fields of service.

If there is that unity of support among the churches the projectors of the movement hope there can be no doubt but that the results will mark a new era in the history of the Church. Criticism that is directed against the efficiency of the Church as an organization for the dissemination of the truths of religion and exemplar of its practices will be disarmed and the power and force of Christianity as the greatest factor for good in the lives of nations and individuals will be given a new and mighty impetus.

If railroads in their private capacities had practiced the Railroad Administration plan of distributing cars to favored coal operators what a howl would have been raised among those who have so ardently advocated government control and ownership.

The Interchurch World Movement has a big plan but it is backed by those who know how to put big things across.

Would not a careful analysis of Uniontown's 3,000 cases of the influenza show a large percentage to be nothing more than grippy colds?

McKeesport seems disposed to drill some holes in State Policeman Lyle's opinion of the new guardians of Pittsburgh.

The War Department proposes to discharge slackers. It appears it is trying to do the same thing to the government's list of ruthless profiteers.

view on a number of questions all of which served to irritate Mr. Wilson who could not brook disagreement. Presently Mr. Wilson began to lose confidence in the judgment of Colonel House and when he failed to consult him he relied more on Mr. Lansing's advice. It began to look as if the two men would get close together after all. Mr. Lansing continued to work hopefully. He didn't want the President to go on that western trip. He thought Mr. Wilson could do much more effective work in Washington and he felt too that the physical strain might break him down.

But the real crux of the situation came when Mr. Lansing showed unmistakable readiness to write a compromise on the peace treaty a willingness to adopt the Lodge reservations to the Wilson viewpoint in such fashion that ratification could be accomplished without loss of dignity by either side. But Mr. Wilson was furious. He was impatient with anyone who even mentioned the word reservation in his presence. The nearest one could get in a communication that would not bring forth his displeasure was the employment of the word "interpretations." Senator Hitchcock could probably tell an interesting story some day about his troubles with President Wilson which would perhaps throw light on why Mr. Lansing was summarily dismissed.

Internationally the departure of Mr. Lansing will cause much uncertainty for our ambassadors and ministers abroad have long felt that they were unable to execute their tasks because of the lack of knowledge of what the Department of State had in mind. There will be even more perplexity because it will take the new secretary of state some time to get his bearings. Mr. Lansing's going will be regretted by newspaper men generally who regarded him as not necessarily the best secretary of state we have ever had but as one of the highest types of public officials—an honest Christian gentleman who gave more to the President than he ever received.
